

College Application Essay Example Nursing

Usually, when we look up the word “nurse” in a dictionary, we find out that it is somebody who cares for a sick person. It sounds so simple and so impersonal. However, I believe being a nurse is much more than just taking care of the needs of a sick person. As one wise man once said, “nursing is a profession where the need to understand your patient outweighs your need to be understood.” Nurses, both male, and female offer invaluable support to people who may be in great pain, who may have suffered life-changing injuries, or who may be dying. This is why it is my belief that a nurse has to be not only perseverant, but also determined, strong-willed, and very thoughtful of others’ sufferings.

So, why do I want to become a nurse? Every day I see people begging for a few pennies on the street so that they can help their loved ones. They are desperate to help people who cannot help themselves. This makes me feel so helpless. I want to be able to do more than just give a few pennies to these people. I want to be able to help them directly. To be honest, I have always felt the need to care for people who cannot take care of themselves. It is in my nature. This is why I know that nursing is what I want to do for the rest of my life.

It is not about money; nurses are not paid handsomely, as you already may know. To me, nursing is truly the right profession. I sincerely believe that I am more than suited to become a nurse. My qualities all point in this direction. I am warm and very compassionate. I have great communication skills and I am a quick learner. Also, I am empathetic and diplomatic; I understand that I will need to communicate with the family and friends of the person I am caring for. This is sometimes not easy to do, and one needs a specific set of skills to be able to put their mind at ease.

The nursing profession is ever-changing and diverse. You never know who you will be caring for tomorrow. Every person is different and each one of us reacts differently to certain situations. However, I am confident that I can successfully handle any situation the nursing profession may throw at me. At the end of the day, the well-being of the person I am caring for is what matters, and I will do whatever is in my power to help a complete stranger in need of assistance. I know that this is the path I choose and I will always be proud of the work I will do every day as a nurse. All I need is the chance to get the excellent education required to become an excellent nurse.
